The first steel postal car ever built has run over 270,000 miles on the Monon Route, been successfully through five smashups, and cost the company only $12 for repairs. The steel car pioneer appears, observes the Detroit Free Press, to be "a stayer."

Paris has gained 167,000 in population in the last five years, reckoning the foreign colonies and the garrison. Marseilles comes second in increase of population, its gain being 31,000. But for the growth of the cities, figures the Boston Transcript, France would show an absolute decrease of population as compared with 1886.

The commercial travellers of this country now number over 250,000, and reach in their journeyings every town and hamlet in this country; they are the greatest distributors of goods, shipping about 300,000,000 tons out of 400,000,000 tons now carried yearly by the railroads, and they spend over $1,750,000 per day, or about $382,000,000 per travelling year of nine months, which is distributed among the carriers, hotels, shopkeepers and producers.

"We have learned how deficient we are in both knowledge and effort in the matter," says the Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal, advocating a system of road improvement throughout the country, "and should turn our attention to the task of learning and doing. Improved roadways in both city and country invariably add to the comforts of life, and, in so far as they do this, tend to increase the value of city and suburban property; while the aggregate of the sums now laid out for repairs upon poor roads and dislocated, shaky vehicles, if saved by judicious road-building, would make a material reduction in the expense account of American communities."

The readiness with which the Chinaman adapts himself to the position of defendant in an American court is admirable, thinks the Detroit Free Press. An immigrant of another race, being arrested and confronted with a charge of any kind, would be confused, and might possibly not make any defence. but the son of the Orient goes into the pocket of his baggy trousers, which is always well filled, engages a lawyer, and settles down to a fight as if he enjoyed it. He fights to the end. too, thriving on appeals and motions for a new trial, and often wiggles out of an apparently impossible position by sheer force of litigious persistence.

The Chicago Herald notes that "the old etymological absurdity which derives the word 'news' from the initial letters of the words denoting the points of the compass—north, east, west, south—is again going the rounds of the press. Such a derivation is equally correct with that of the Southern school boy who said that hominy was derived from homini (the dative case of homo, a man) because it was good 'for a man.' 'News' is simply the pural of the adjective new used as a noun. The French use nouvelles, the pural of neuvelle. Really, there is no science in which a little learning is so dangerous a thing as in philology."

The president of one of the leading gas companies of New York stated at the last annual meeting of the company that no greater benefactor to the interests of gas companies had ever been known than the electric light. In stating that the gas output of New York was doubling itself now in a period of six and one-half years instead of ten years, as before, he gave it as his belief that this phenomenal increase was due to the fact that the electric light has educated the human eye to demand more light, and that people are not satisfied with the volume of light that formerly satisfied them. Another proof of the indirect benefit which may accrue to the gas industry from the use of electric lights, adds the Chicago News, is the extent to which gas companies all over the country are installing electric light plants of their own.

According to the Boston Cultivator, "the people of Southern California are pleased with the new channel for Colorado River, which it has broken for itself, and which makes Salton Lake possible. The Lake will modify the arid, heated temperature of Southern California, Arizona and possibly also New Mexico. The Southern Pacific Railroad is about to try to stop the overflow of Colorado River on the ground that the lake is likely to destroy its property. But a lake for this arid region is far better than the desert that has hertofore existed there. Let the railroad company change its lines to the northern shores of the lake, and await with confidence the increased business which an abundant supply of moisture will create in that region. It is likely that the courts will be appealed to for the purpose of preventing changes in the present course of the river, which will make a rich country out of what must otherwise always have been a desert."

Beyond the Stars.

Beyond the stars, beyond our sight,
Above those silent worlds of light,
There is so much for which we care;
Our best and deepest love is there,
In that vast realm that knows no night.

Cold glitt'ring orbs of radiance bright,
Look down in pity from your height,
And tell us of that land so fair,
Beyond the stars.

Death knows not mercy in his might;
His hand Earth's fairest bloom doth blight;
But still we trust and kneel in prayer;
There is no sinning, no despair,
But perfect safety—all is right,
Beyond the stars.

IN THE ORCHARD.

BY FRANCIS ASHETON.

It is a gentle May day, and the apple blossoms are breaking whitely over the trees in the Cavanaghs' orchard. Rhode Island is never luxuriant and in May is often grugging of her favors, but this spring she seems to have been seized by a kindly caprice, and adorns herself for the benefit of her children. One does not have to be of the soil, however, to be grateful for her loveliness, and Miss Humphreys, though an alien, is aware of her privileges. She is sitting on a flat stone, resting and talking over past times with her companion, a man whom one would describe as long rather than tall, and who is occupied in making excavations on a small scale among the roots of the tree under which he is sitting.

"I never could understand why the Dennisons asked me on their party at all," Miss Humphreys is saying. "I was on excessively bad terms with Charles Dennison at the time"—her companion looked up significantly—"and Carrie and I quarrelled every day and several times an evening. I went because I was utterly bored with life just then, and intended to be amused at any cost—and I was." She met the young man's eyes for a moment and then turned away and went on: "Do you remember our impromptu ball? You played fiddler—"

"And you danced with Charley," finished the other, "with whom you were on such excessively bad terms."

Dolly laughed. "Yes, with all his faults he danced like a—"

"Dream," cut in the young man, sarcastically. "That is the correct expression."

"I never knew you to have such an envious and bitter turn of mind. I thought you were above it."

"I find in the course of thirty odd years that I am above nothing, but cheating at cards and telling tales," was the answer."

"Dear me! What a gloomy outlook for Miss Dolmer!" said Dolly; but the constraint of her manner took the lightness from her speech, and Aikens was as serious as he answered,

"Yes, but Miss Dolmer does not expect much.

Dorothy flushed. "The fool?" she said in her soul; outwardly she was silent.

"I remember," began the young man, slowly, trying to paint in words the picture that rose before his eyes, "that night in the big west room as though it was yesterday, the roaring fire snapping and blazing on the wide hearth, the Christmas holly green and dark everywhere, its glistening floor and the old square piano pushed up in the corner, behind which it was my hard necessity to sit and play while you danced, Dolly." His dark eyes, in which the pupils seemed points of light, flashed into hers.

"Whose fault was that?" she returned reproachfully.

"Yours," came the answer bitterly—"yours—yours. It was all in your hands, and you chose to throw me away like a—"

"Hush!" she interrupted, the beautiful color mounting to her cheek. "That is not true, and you must not say it."

He was calm again, and went back to his reminiscences.

"It was wet and cold and blustering outside, and I spent ten pleasant minutes standing in the rain to cool off some of my superfluous spirit." And he smiled sadly. He was what most people did not care to look at, without being ugly. No one could be ugly with that straight fine-cut nose and the eloquence and fire of his eyes; but the long, rather haggard face was thought sinister, and the thin lips cold and hard. "Did you enjoy those dances, Dolly?" He leaned forward and looked into her eyes.

"Yes," she answered, blushing. "I loved the movement, and I knew all the time—"

"That I was eating my heart out," he interrupted, scornfully; "and you liked that almost as well as making a fool of Poor Charley Dennison."

"Don't," said Dolly; "you hurt me and you have no right."

"No, I have no right to upbraid you, poor girl! You had too many lovers and too light a heart not to make some of them unhappy. Only I wish I had not been one of the sufferers; that is all. Oh, Dolly, I think I could have withstood you, if it hadn't been for that day on the river in the autumn, when you tried your best to wile the heart out of me, and—"

"Failed!" said Miss Humphreys, steadily. "I have never had your heart, Mr. Aiken; it has been in your own undisturbed possession ever since I have known you. If you had cared you would never have gone away from the Dennisons' without a word."

His eyes blazed, but he said nothing.

"This is all very unprofitable," she went on, leaning back against a tree; "let us change the subject."

Aiken's eyes wandered away through the orchard. "By all means," he said, and then again fell to studying her face.

Two years and over since they had parted that Christmas day, and he had never seen her since. Two years had made a change. Two years ago he had a cherished theory that it would be impossible to bring tears to those brilliant gray eyes. Somehow today that theory was destroyed. Two years ago she could laugh at you, mystify you, allure and deceive you, but love you never, so he believed.

"'Tis summer, fiery summer,
Upon thy cheeks divine;
'Tis winter, icy winter,
In that little heart of thine."

But to-day—to-day! Suddenly a hope, a slight but exquisite hope, stirred within him. A slow fire of passion darkened his searching eyes. Miss Dolmer, to whom he had intended to propose in the course of week—Miss Dolmer to whom he had paid a number of business-like attentions—sank swiftly out of sight. He remembered a dream he had the summer before in which Dolly Humphreys had been walking by the sea and he had kissed her and waked to spend a week in utter misery in blotting out every memory that crowded into view.

"Where were you last summer in August?" he asked.

"I was at the sea-shore," she answered, and colored a little, that same delicate pink that he remembered with a vividness that was half joy, half pain. "I spent hours literally on the beach. Nobody else had any liking for it, they preferred gayer spots, but I became quite a solitary last summer, and used to watch the waves through the long a ternoon. Mamma got rather nervous, for I refused any company, and she was divided between a fear that I was meeting an ineligible suitor or getting a bit touched in my head. I will say that she might have had some reason for the latter theory, had I told her what queer fancies I had, for I got quite under the influence of the curling green waves."

"A modern Lorelei," said Aiken.

"I was much more like a shipwrecked mariner," said Dolly, smiling softly. "I had one idea that I remember, that if I waited very patiently the waves would wash up at my feet a treasure. What the treasure was I did not know, but something that would rejoice me forever."

"The jewels of some poor mermaid who mislaid them," suggested Aiken, watching her with hope growing in his heart.

"I had a fancy, also," went on Miss Humphreys, rather shyly, "that some of my old friends might turn up; you among them. That you might suddenly appear walking along the smooth tawny sand, and we would have a friendly talk together."

"If I had only known," said Aiken, between his teeth. "But," he added, smiling a little, "I wouldn't have come as an old friend. I never was one." Dorothy looked into his face with a hurt wonder, which changed as he added, "I was your lover, dear."

"What were you doing all last summer," she said, hastily, leaning forward and setting six small stones in an even row, while her cheeks again colored pink.

"I worked," was the brief answer.

"All the time?" raising soft pitying eyes to his.

"Most of it; but I did not mind the work; it took my thoughts from other things, and I had nothing pleasant to think of."

"What a melancholy young man!" said Miss Humphreys, lightly. "You should have paid the sea a visit as I did, and found solace for your ills."

"Did you need solace also?" asked Aiken, eagerly. "Were you not happy too?"

"What an impertinent question!" and Dolly laughed a little. "Why should I not be happy?"

"I thought—I hoped," went on the young man, earnestly, with intense pleading in his eyes, "that perhaps you were lonely, too. That perhaps you had a little of the heartache that was with me night and day, and has been these two long years and more. I hoped that you perhaps regretted your cruelty to me at the last, and would at least let me try again. I know I have no right," he continued, "to cherish my hopes—you certainly did your best to crush them out—but we had been so happy before I grew quite mad about you, and you had seemed to like me then, and so it suddenly comes to me that now, after these years, you might give me another chance. God knows I ask nothing better than to spend my heart and soul in trying to make you love me. Speak, Dolly, give me some answer. Am I gone mad again, or—"

He did not try to touch her hand or make her look at him, but waited in a passionate silence that somehow made itself felt in the quiet spring air. Slowly Miss Humphreys heaped her six little stones one on the other, and as they fell to the ground she turned and looked at him and smiled, a wistful, deprecating smile that steadied his hot impulse to express his utter joy, and yet gave him full measure of it.

"Don't say anything now," she whispered. "I could not bear to hear it;" and her eyes asked for a merciful gentleness from him, and not in vain. Controlling himself, he turned away from her and looked about the orchard with happy eyes that noted every beauty of color and form.

"We have never been together anywhere in the spring, have we?" he said, still looking away to the flowering trees. "In the summer, in the autumn, in the winter, but never in the spring. I see it all with new eyes; I always have seen things differently when with you. Today the apple blossoms are a shade more pink, the sky a deeper blue, than when I walked here yesterday. Will you go down to the lake with me? There is a boat, and I could row you in and out the little islands that are still brown with last summer's leaves. Will you come?"

"Yes, I will come," she answers, smiling, and springs lightly to her feet. "Which way is it? I have never staid here before, you know."

"That little path through the trees. But first I want you to give me something.' She raises frightened eyes to his. "Neither your money nor your life—don't be afraid!—but that violet in your dress."

Dorothy looks down at it, and draws her breath quicker between her parted lips. "And if I do?" she said.

"If you do," he returned, "I shall ask you to give me the white hand that picked it."

With a swift movement she took the flower from her dress, and held it towards him, and Aiken caught her hand in both of his, and raised it to his lips.—[Harper's Weekly.

Fastest Train in the World.

How many people are aware that the fastest scheduled train in the world runs between Washington and Jersey City every day? The train is the Baltimore and Ohio, New York and Washington limited, and it uses the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and Philadelphia and Reading between Jersey City and Philadelphia. The latter roads furnish the locomotives on this part of the line.

Notwithstanding the stories about trains running 90 miles an hour in England, nothing of the kind is provided in the time tables of the London and Northwestern and Great Northern, which admittedly have the fastest scheduled trains in the kingdom. The fastest train on the Northwestern is the celebrated Scotch express, which makes the run of 400 miles from London to Edinburgh in 8 1-2 hours. This is at a rate of 51.6 miles an hour, allowing for stops. The Royal Blue line trains make the run of 226 miles between New York and Washington in 5 hours, which is at an average speed of 51.9 miles an hour, with corresponding allowances for stops.

The Scotch express does better than 51.6 miles an hour between certain stations. Its best run is the 75 1-4 miles from Rugby to Crewe in 85 minutes, an average of 53 miles an hour. But the Royal Blue line also makes some smart runs. On the Baltimore and Ohio road, between Baltimore and Washington, it averages 60 miles an hour for the greater part of the 40 miles, while the Reading and Jersey Central engineers, in places, rush along at 75 to 80 miles an hour, and do it every day. It is said that the Great Northern has lately added a still faster train than the Scotch express of the London and Northwestern. It averages 54 miles an hour, but only for a distance of 105 1-4 miles.—[New York Sun.

"Arabian Nights" a Composite Work.

"The Arabian Nights" is not the work of any one person. Originally the tales were related by the story tellers of Arabia. They were afterwards committed to writing by one or more persons, and finally were collected in the form in which they are now found. The best English translation is by Col. Lane, who was the best Arabic and Syriac scholar of his day, and on the recommendation of the prime minister of England he received a pension from Queen Victoria in recognition of his services. He was the author of the best Arabic dictionary for Europeans, and his version of "The Arabian Nights" has been translated into almost every European language.—[Detroit Free Press.

"I never knew Cumcash to have but one failing," said a friend of his to a business man. "Yes," replied the business man, "that's about all; but I understand he made a great deal of money out of that."

Wonders Wrought by Pressure.

The enormous depth of the great Comstock mines in Nevada and the gigantic and incomprehensible weight of the mass of stones and earth resting upon the timbers (which actually hold up the mountains that have literally been honey-combed by the miners) have wrought wonders which puzzle the deepest thinkers. For instance, queer polished sticks, as smooth as dressed mahogany and not thicker than your wrist, are often taken out of deserted portions of the mines. They are as hard and as heavy as iron, and a knife of the best material will not make a scratch on them. Do you have any idea what they are? Drill cores, you think, but they are not. Originally they were solid oak timbers, 12x12 inches square. But why are they no thicker then a walking stick upon removal after having seen years of service? The weight of the mountain bearing upon them from all directions, perpendicularly as well as internally (for it is only in this way that mines of enormous depth can be safely timbered) has wrought the wonders seen in the polished stick. Sometimes these transformed timbers are found in small sections, sometimes in long pieces, and are taken out where the cave-ins have occurred and displaced the workings.

It is a well-known fact that paper can be compressed until it will be so hard that a diamond will hardly touch it, but no known mechanism of the present or the past has the power to compress and work marvels with wood.—[St. Louis Republic.

Grafting Teeth.

Much has been written of late about skin-grafting, and a Reading physician has even succeeded in transplanting a mustache to the upper lip of a woman. But there are several local dentists who have met with remarkable success in grafting teeth. The process is known as implanting, and should not be confounded with either transplanting or replanting, both of which have been done for years. In implanting a tooth the gum may have entirely healed over; in fact, a tooth may be implanted years after its predecessor has been removed. With the aid of cocaine the operation is not attended with any great amount of pain. The gum is thoroughly saturated with cocaine and an incision is made exposing the jawbone. A socket is then drilled into the bone and a tooth, after having been placed in an antiseptic solution, is fitted into the socket and tightly bound in its place. The wound heals quickly, and in two weeks the grafted tooth partakes of all the nature of a perfectly natural tooth.—[Philadelphia Record.

A Bit of True Politeness.

Some time ago a friend of the writer gave a dinner to which a young man, his wife and their little child were invited. The child was a very precocious, bashful and intensely sensitive little one. During the dinner she upset a glass of water upon the table-cloth, and hastily noticing the looks in her direction, her little lip quivered and her eyes filled with tears. At that moment my friend, who gave the dinner, knocked over his own glass with a crash that drew every eye in his direction. He laughed over the matter and said it made no difference, etc., and succeeded in withdrawing the attention from the child, who soon smiled again. That I consider to have been the perfection of politeness.—[Farm and Fireside.

Six Suits in One Day.

On one day, during his stay in England, Emperor William changed his clothes exactly six times. He wore four different uniforms in the course of the day and two different suits of plain clothes. Why the emperor should have arrayed himself as a British admiral to visit Albert Hall is as incomprehensible as the reason which induced the Prince of Wales to make himself uncomfortable by putting on a hot, unattractive and anything but becoming Prussian uniform. The emperor's announcement—made as usual at the last moment—that he wished the Albert Hall visit to be an affair of "semi-state" caused infinite trouble and inconvenience to all concerned.—[Chicago News.

The Biggest Engine in the World.

It is not strange at all that the biggest engine in the world is exercising its ponderous strength in Pennsylvania. "The President," as it is called, is constantly at work pumping water from the zinc mines at Friedensville, Lehigh county. Its enormous power is that of 5000 horses, or as it is computed, of 35,000 men. In the same county there is still preserved at Hokondauqua the first engine ever used in Lehigh, and set up at Allentown by Eli Sager in 1838.—[Philadelphia Press.

THE CELLAR.

A Part of the House Which is Often Neglected.

Some Practical Hints About its Proper Arrangement.

When the house-keeper has bought, built, or hired her house, after due consideration of the family needs and tastes, and after careful examination of the locality and construction of the chosen home, her earliest attention should be directed to the cellar, as that part of the home which is most often neglected, and where order and convenience combined add no small amount to the comfort and healthfulness of all parts of the house.

The arrangement of the cellar takes time and attention rather than any great outlay of money. The windows should first be seen to. A stuffy, unventilated cellar, full of dead air, is an abomination. The windows should be so hung that they can be removed from the inside, and during all but the extreme winter months should be taken out, and even then in mild days they should be opened in the middle of the day. The outside of the windows should be protected by galvanized wire window netting, costing two and a half cents the square foot. A heavier, coarser-meshed quality can be used instead, if great strength is desired.

This quality costs six cents the square foot. The hatchways of city houses are troublesome in cold weather. Both the rear and front hatchways admit a great deal of wind during the winter, in spite of the wooden covers that are fitted to them, and make the kitchen and dining-room floors draughty and cold. This can be remedied by covering the iron grating over each hatchway with several folds of old carpeting or furniture sacking, and then fitting the cover down tightly. The hatchway on the sunny side of the house must be frequently opened for air. The cellar should be thoroughly whitewashed, two heavy coats being enough.

All the cellars, and many in the country towns and villages, are cemented, which under most conditions is the safest and cleanest flooring. But in the country, where the ground is not poisoned from leakages of sewers or the foul gases of cesspools, and where, yet farther, the ground is dry and sandy, a cellar bottom of well-beaten earth is not unwholesome, and has a mysterious capacity of keeping fruits and vegetables beyond that of cemented cellars. Such a cellar should have boards for walks to bins, barrels, and cupboard, to keep the house-mother from fretting over the dirt "tracked up." If these boards are occasionally turned over when swept, there will be no trouble from dampness or "saw bugs." Raising them up slightly from the ground by inch cleats nailed to the under side of the boards is another and better method.

In a cellar where there is a furnace, it is a great help to household management to have a portion of the cellar divided from the furnace portion by a tight board partition, with a padlocked door opening into it. The boards used may be rough and cheap, costing two cents a foot; but the partitions must be tight, so as not to admit the warm air from the furnace. Under ordinary circumstances the expense need not be over ten dollars and in many cases even less.

In this cold cellar the vegetables and apples, butter and preserves, may be kept, and even in the city the uncomfortable habit of living from hand to mouth might be changed to a great degree. Here the time-honored vinegar barrel or keg may have its place, giving out its supply of "pure cider" vinegar whenever needed. Near by should be the swinging shelf and cupboard, and the old-time feeling of plenty and comfort, which the memory of the well-filled cellars of country homes always brings, would return to the household.—[Harper's Weekly.

Strength of Spiders.

The physical powers of the popular running, ground or wolf spiders, are well illustrated by an instance recorded in the proceedings of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. The result, as reported, was achieved by pure strength and activity, without any of the mechanical advantages of a snare. Mr. Springer, while walking with a friend in a swampy wood, which was pierced by a dike three feet wide, was attracted by the extraordinary movements of a large black spider in the middle of a ditch. Closer examination showed that the creature had caught a fish. She had fastened upon it with a deadly grip just on the forward side of the dorsal fin, and the poor fish was swimming round and round slowly or twisting its body as if in pain. The head of its black enemy was sometimes almost pulled under water, but the strength of the fish would not permit an entire submersion. It moved its fins as if exhausted and often rested. Finally it swam under a floating leaf near the shore and made a vain effort to dislodge the spider by scraping against the under side of the leaf. The two had now closely approached the bank. Suddenly the long black legs of the spider emerged from the water and the hind ones reached out and fastened upon the irregularities of the sides of the ditch. The spider commenced tugging at his prize in order to land it. The observer ran to the nearest house for a wide-mouthed bottle, leaving his friend to watch the struggle. During an interval of six or eight minutes' absence the spider had drawn the fish out of the water; then both creatures had fallen in again the bank being nearly perpendicular. There followed a great struggle, and on Mr. Springer's return the fish was hoisted nearly half its length out upon the land. It was very much exhausted, hardly making any movement, and was being slowly and steadily drawn up by the spider, which had evidently gained the victory.—[Chicago Herald.

Value of Machinery.

Few persons have any correct idea of the difficulties which were met with sixty to seventy years ago in making suitable tools and machinery from metal. There were no planing, boring or shaping machines; the turning lathe and the drill-borer were about all the devices which could be called into use by the mechanic of that time. Inventors had to make by hand the machines they invented, with the aid of other machines in making the individual parts. They had to invent some tools so as to be able to make certain parts of their invented machine. When the celebrated English machinist Clement entered a shop as master at London in 1814, he found the tools so poor and defective that he had to spend days in making such ones as were needed. James Watts, the inventor of the steam engine, could not get his first machines in working order in consequence of a lack of some contrivances. The first cylinder which he had cast was not tight, and was on one end five millimeters wider than on the other. A good cylinder should not show more difference in width than one-half millimeter.

And then the cost of work at that time was extravagant. Whitworth, one of the oldest manufacturers of working machines in England, says that the polishing of cast-iron cost $3 per square foot forty years ago, as the work had to be done by hand. The manufacturer Perry paid for the first steel pens $1.25 apiece, but still these pens were not so good in quality as those which are made today. After the factories had been established, the price of a steel pen was still $1, then fifty cents and then twenty-five cents, which price was kept up for some time. Today one can get a gross for that price; all owing to our perfect machinery.—[New Orleans Delta.

Rival of the Mafia.

The Infame Legge, which was discovered a short time ago, in Andria, Italy, is an organization similar to the Maia Vita, although far less notorious. The confiscation of the account books in the house of a member led to the revelation of interesting details of its management. A candidtae for membership received instruction in fencing and shooting for $2 monthly. After acquiring the necessary amount of skill for his murderous calling he became a "neophyte." The chief, during the ceremony of admission, cut the candidate in the breast with a dagger, and then the candidate, with his hand on the bloody weapon, swore loyalty to the society. The steps of promotion were indicated by the titles "neophyte," "regular," "the initiated," and "chief." In Barletta the Infame Legge had a woman's branch organization. The first arrest of members of the society took place in Andria. In one hour fifty of these declared highwaymen and murderers were captured, and the work of hunting them down is still in progress. The name of the society means, literally, "Infamous Law."—[New Orleans Times-Democrat.

White Money Paper.

Notice has been issued from the Treasury Department regarding distinctive paper for the obligations and other securities of the United States. The silk thread paper adopted in 1885 will be used until the present supply is exhausted. The new material for United States notes, National bank notes and certificates is a cream-white bank note paper. Its distinctive feature consists of a localized red and blue fiber incorporated in the body of the paper, while in the process of manufacture, so placed as to form a perpendicular stripe on either side of the center portrait or vignette of each note and other obligation. The distinctive paper of similar quality with water mark, U. S. T., D. so placed therein that it may show on each separate check or draft, adopted in 1885 for United States checks and drafts, will be continued in use for that purpose.—[Picayune.

Sleep's Lullaby.

Dear Sleep, thou art my merciful(e)s friend.
When, tired of all, nightly I come to thee;
Thou art so patient and good to me.
How gently do thy faithful hands extend
The old sweet welcome, motherly and mend
My broken toys of hope, while at thy knee
Quite forget the hurtful things to be.
And when I feel thee touch my brow and bend
To kiss mine eyes, I love to put my hand
Into thine own to feel that thou art near,
To nestle closely to thy peaceful breast.
And hear that lullaby about that land
Sung of so softly, where there is no tear,
And where the weary are for aye at rest.

Women may not be deep thinkers, but they are generally clothes observers.

Engaged couples may not average larger than other people, yet they are often distinguished by their sighs.

If we could only see ourselves as others see us, the probability is that most of us would look the other way.

"I wonder why all these timid fellows are marrying brunettes?" "Probably because 'Faint heart ne'er won fair lady.'"

In the slang of the day to say that a thing "has no flies on it" is to compliment it, but it is no compliment to fly-paper.

The most attentive man to business we ever knew was he who wrote on his shop-door: "Gone to get married; return in half an hour."

"She is a very clever woman." "Oh, she is! I had an hour's conversation with her yesterday and didn't have a chance to say a word."

Teacher—"Name some of the most important things existing today which were unknown one hundred years ago?" Tommy—"You and me."

Trembling Youth—"Madame, I love you to distraction. Will you be my wife?" Girl of the Future—"You may leave your references and call again."

She—"Papa, may I marry Jack? I could go further and fare worse." He—"You couldn't fare worse." She—"Then what's the use of my going further?"

A Baltimore lady, with her little daughter, met an acquaintance and stopped to ask after a mutual friend. A Promising Outlook.

Gus Snobberly, who is a poetry-stricken youth, applied to old Mr. Bondclipper for the hand of his daughter Lucy, who was in the room at the time.

"What are your resources?" asked old Bondclipper.

"In the first place, I've sent my application to President Harrison for a position in one of the departments."

"Have you any other resources?" asked the prospective father in-law.

"You bet I have. I'm seriously thinking of giving up smoking."

THE LATEST MISTAKE.

A Massachusetts mugwump editor says that the silver plank in the Ohio Democratic platform was put in by mistake. Very likely, but the Democrats have put so many "mistakes" in their platforms, not only State but National, that the habit seems to be chronic in the party.

Speaking of these mistakes, the New York Press says that the Democrats made the mistake of opposing every step toward genuine reconstruction. The Republicans, under Grant, rectified that error.

They have made the mistake of advocating the interests of foreign industry at the expense of American labor. They have not acknowledged that mistake yet, but they will after 1892.

Their latest mistake is the advocacy of debased coinage as pay for the workingman's labor. The Republican party will show them how great that mistake is next November.

SWINDLED FARMERS.

It is stated that the people who flocked with the Georgia Farmers' Alliance with such lamblike trust have been swindled out of $70,000 through the fradulent operations of a so-called "Alliance Exchange" in which they were induced to put their money by the hope of big profits. This is severe on the farmers. But it ought to teach them that the surest as well as the most honest way to make money is by hard work. The "exchange" that is most profitable to the farmer is the exchange of his produce for cash—and the fewer middle men there are between producer and consumer the better.

SYMPATHY IS CHEAP.

The Pennsylvania Democrats in their platform express sympathy with "the just demands of the workingmen." It is a way that Democratic politicians have. Their sympathy for the workingman, shortly before election, is abundant; and only equaled in quantity by their utter indifference to the workingman after election is over.

Sympathy is cheap, and the Democratic platforms are correspondingly liberal in dispensing it. Democratic leaders profess to love the American workingman, but they would greatly prefer to buy a coat made by a workingman in Europe.

If all the people of the United States need except the produce of the soil is to be bought of foreigners because they can produce it cheaper, what are all our people going to do? Shall they all go to farming? Shall they all go raising wheat, corn, cotton and meat for sale to foreigners, using the proceeds in buying from foreigners everything else of human use?

On Wednesday last the Republicans of New York met in Convention and nominated a State ticket. It was the largest and most harmonious Convention ever held in the Empire State and the ticket is conceded to be the strongest and best, and it is arousing an intense enthusiasm.

The chief glory of our civilization is the American home, and the triumph of our economic system is the fact that in no other country do so many people who work for wages own such beautiful homes as abound in all our villages and towns.

Instead of proving the Pandora's box of evils the false prophets predicted, the McKinley tariff has inaugurated an era of prosperity that is beginning to pulsate with energy in every economic artery.

"Oh, yes, we have prohibition," says a Maine man, "but the trouble is we haven't got the blamed thing quite fixed so that it will prohibit." That appears to be the weak point in prohibition everywhere.

The Treasurer of the United States has officially reported that the cash in the Treasury at the close of business on September 11th, was $150,051,998.43. Not "bankrupted" yet.

With a crop of 70,000,000 million bushels of wheat in Kansas, worth on the farm in the neighborhood of $1 a bushel, the mortgage-holder becomes a quite harmless sort of vermin, so to speak.

When the population of a country is increasing 24 per cent and the wealth of the people 48 per cent every ten years the role of the calamityite is not an attractive one.

The Republican party favors an honest, full value dollar with which to pay the workingman's wages, instead of the 74 cent dollar advocated by the Democratic leaders.

The cry of "Turn the rascals out" has its restrictions. It does not refer to the rascals in prison.

A contemporary remarks that while typhoons and cyclones, railroad collisions and mine disasters, earthquakes and floods, fires and fevers are busy removing men from the world, there is yet no scarcity of people. In fact, there are, in many places, too many. Cupid reigns, and the race still lives.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, September 12, 1891.

"The President," said a member of the administration, who has been been Mr. Harrison's guest at Cape May Point within a week, "has not, except in a general way, yet given any consideration to the selection of a successor to Secretary Proctor, nor is it probable that he will for several weeks to come. There are other things occupying his attention at present, and there is no good reason for his being in a hurry to pick out a new Secretary of War. My own impression is that two new members of the Cabinet will be appointed at the same time, and that the appointments will not be mad until late in October, possibly not until November." The gentleman declined to name the other member of the Cabinet who he believes will resign but there are reasons for believing that it is Attorney General Miller, who is thought to be booked for one of the new Circuit Court judgeships, although he refuses to discuss the subject.

Secretary Blaine will return to his duties at the State department not later than the first of October. Word was received at his Washington residence this week to get it ready for the family at once. This will be very unpleasant news for the ghouls who have labored so industriously through the summer just passed to kill him, but to the thousands of patriotic Americans who admire his manly way of conducting our foreign affairs it will be most welcome news.

Representative Mills seems to be getting alarmed at the Speakership prospects and his friends in their efforts to secure eartern support for him have been giving it out that his ideas about the free coinage of silver have lately undergone a change and that he may in the near future write a letter defining his position on the subject. And they hint that in that letter he will take a position very near to that occupied by Mr. Cleveland on the same question.

The question of the seizure of the Chilian steamer Itata, which many people feared might become a serious as well as an expensive one, has been happily settled, at a conference held here, with Secretary Foster and Attorney General Miller representing this Government, and ex-Mayor Grace, of New York, and Messrs. Montt, Foster and Trumbull the new Chilial government. Under the agreement reached the Itata is to be turned over to the Chilian government and the case against her for violating our neutrality laws nolle prossed in the courts, and the Chilian government is to pay to the United States a sum equal to the expenses of the cruiser Charleston in making the chase after the Itata. This is a very satisfactory ending of the matter, much more so than if the Chilian government had made a demand for heavy damages on account of the se zure.

The State department has been officially notified that Denmark, which followed Germany in excluding American pork, has followed the same example in removing restrictions upon its importation, and is now prepared to admit all that may be shipped there accompanied by the United States certificate of inspection. Secretary Rusk is not doing much talking about his triumphs, but his friends are shouting as they have a right to do, for to him more than any other man is due the credit for the meat inspection law, without which the restrictions upon the importation of American pork would not have been removed by Germany or Denmark. The Secretary is hopeful that France will follow suit and remove the restrictions upon the importation before the close of the year.

From Our Boston Correspondent.

BOSTON, September 8, '91.

Editor CAROLINIAN.

I never omit reading the second, third and fourth columns of the third page of the CAROLINIAN. I never do so but what I get paid for the solid hints the little items contain. Like all great truths, they are dressed in language so simple a child can understand them. Your town grows by the growth of the people, and the people don't dwarf but grow too, by the influence of your paper. To cull, to originate things intelligent and profitable for the people to know, requires intelligence and patience, too. The one dollar and fifty cents per annum in advance enables one to dismiss the public world and give close attention to his business, and waite the week's end, when all that is important for him to know is at easy reach of his hands. What an admirable arrangement is a public Press for a community the world over.

The election of a new head is at hand—an interesting incident, but we perform our duty better by sticking to the hoe and study up its sublime economy, than in talking no wiser than monkeys about party candidates that love and set by us, just the value of one vote and no more. Oot in the Nation, in the field and workshop, a great deal of silent thinking is going on. This promises well for the individual and the Nation; what is one is the other. By this process the value of the tariff will be established and the best qualification for head will be duly considered, and the value of the ballot box rendered agreeable to us.

Providence and the plow, which is a man's strong hand, have crowned the earth with plenty; and this is a word that is equivalent to profit of a persons hard toil, that carries comfort to the homes in the land, Let us be thankful. Politically both parties, Democratic and Republican, in the face of a bountiful Providence are strongly harnessed up for the Presidential conflict. Each will put forth the best set of persuasions they know of to win votes. The Democrats are content to deal with the more natural strata of human nature—its ungrafted timber; the Republicans seek engraftments that make principalities a little more dignified and refined, if the reader will allow the expression, and give a lift up to public and private life. The misfortune of the Democratic party, it seems to me, is that they have got a set of notions that wont stand the strain of the ballot box.

W. S.

Why I am a Protectionist.

By Hon. P. C. Cheney, ex-Governor of New Hampshire.

I believe in the inherent right of self-preservation, both for man and government. My observation and experience, both in this and foreign countries, assures me that a "Free Trade" policy for America inures only to the benefit of those abroad. All foreign nations know this and hence urge us to adopt it. Our loss would be their gain. Only by Protection are we enabled to pay the highest for labor and sell the lowest to the workman.

This condition makes the United States conspicuously prosperous.

Our government should be as exacting from foreigners as from Americans. Make them pay duty, while we pay taxes.

TO THE LADIES,

There are thousands of ladies throughout the country whose systems are poisoned, and whose blood is in an impure condition from the absorption of impure matter, due to menstrual irregularities. This class are peculiarly benefited by the wonderful tonic and blood-cleansing properties of Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium—P P P. Roses and bounding health take the place of the sickly look, the lost color, and the general wreck of the system. P P P is the cure—be sure to get it at once.

Malaria.

This disease yields quickly to the wonderful powers of P P P, (Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium) People living in miasmatic countries should never be without P P P. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Amusements at the Exposition.

If the Inter-State Immigration Bureau supposed when they elected Jno. T. Patrick as General Director of the Exposition to be held in the city of Raleigh, N. C., October 1st to December 1st, 1891, that he would have purely an simply an exhibition of the products of the soil, mines and forests, they will be badly mistaken. Patrick is yet a young man, but he has been connected with fairs and expositions for the past fifteen years, and he knows the average visitor to fairs wants something to laugh at, and we will lay a wager that there will be more balloon ascensions, and curious freaks of nature, and laughable amusements from the opening to the closing day, than was ever crowded into any exposition or fair. Patrick is right; don't give us stale dry bread without butter on it every day through life.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or Chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at A. Wadsworth's drug store.

About Defaulting Treasurers

New York Press.

The Democrats of Pennsylvania, in their platform, recently adopted, denounced the Republican State officials for the Bardsley defalcation as Treasurer of Pennsylvania. On this theory of responsibility the Democratic party of the United States is responsible for the defalcations of the State Treasurers of Arkansas, Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, Maryland, Mississippi and Tennessee. It is a poor rule that will not work both ways, you know.

What the Tariff has Done.

Philadelphia Press.

"The Manchester Guardian" says that the English cotton manufacturers have "advanced their quotations." Thanks to the benefits of the tariff, it is a matter of indifference to Americans what English cotton manufacturers do. Cotton goods cheaper in this country now than ever before.

The Oyster Commissioners of the State have purchased, for $7,500, a fast and well-built steam yacht, originally costing $27,000, to be used as a patrol boat.

More convenient than a pill is Simmons Liver Regulator. It is made both liquid and powder.

October the 20th has been set as the date of the meeting of the North Carolina Board of World's Fair Managers to discuss ways and means of securing funds for securing an exhibit for this State.

A dose of Simmons Liver Regulator, taken daily, will relieve and prevent indigestion.

Neuralgic Persons

And those troubled with nervousness resulting from care or overwork will be relieved by taking Brown's Iron Bitters. Genuine has trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper.

Alligators.

Florida can still lay claim to alligators. The yankees have not killed them all out yet; for there have been shipped to Raleigh, N. C., to be shown during the Southern Inter-State Exposition October 1st to December 1st, twenty-eight alligators. Florida will no doubt have the most interesting and novel exhibit at the Exposition. The Florida display will be worth going to see.

Dr. H. B. Battle has been duly appointed a member of the Advisory Council of the World's Fair Congress of the World's Columbian Exposition Meteorological Congress.

WORKING PEOPLE can take Simmons Liver Regulator without loss of time or danger from exposure. It takes the place of a doctor and costly prescriptions and is therefore the medicine to be kept in the household to be given upon any indication of approaching sickness. It contains no dangerous ingredients but is purely vegetable, gentle yet thorough in its action, and can be given with safety and the most satisfactory results to any person regardless of age. It has no equal. Try it.

The North Carolinian.

Wednesday, September 16, 1891.

☞Come to the Fair.

☞Swell the crowd to-morrow and next day.

☞Increased crops per acre imply reduced cost per bushel.

☞His Honor Judge Brown is holding Court at Camden this week.

☞The season at Nags Head is closing. The steamer "Burrus" will make her last trip on Friday.

☞Another interesting letter from our Boston correspondent will be found in this week's CAROLINIAN.

☞Farmers in Western Pasquotank, in the vicinity of the "Great Park Estate," complain of bears doing damage to corn and stock.

☞A very intering and successful protracted meeting has been in progress in the Methodist Church at Munteo during the past week.

☞No farmer can afford to hold himself aloof from the general movement toward organization among the tillers of the soil, It is born of necessity, and all should help,

☞The Young Mens' Christian Association have engaged "Blind Tom," the famous Musical prodigy, to give a Concert on Thursday night at the Court House. Reserved seats for sale at Geo. W. Brothers' store.

☞The "Congregationalist" says it would not be a bad idea to set down at the feet of a horse and learn humility. Jusso. Sit down at the hind feet of a mule, and if he don't humiliate you, pull his tail and await results.

☞Our friend Josiah Nicholson, of Belvidere, will accept our thanks for remembering us with a copy of the "Minutes of North Carolina Yearly Meeting of Friends, held at High Point, N. C." We always enjoy reading the report of the proceedings of this religion denomination.

☞The Managers of the Elizabeth City Fair did not deem it necessary to appoint special soliciting committees to make personal visits and requests for exhibits. The publication and distribution of the Premium List was a general invitation and judging from the deep interest manifested in the past they felt that the ladies would not expect any other.

☞In addition to the regular trains on the Railroad, there will be a special train from the Fair Grounds to Moyock on Thursday evening, and also a morning and evening train from and to Edenton on Friday the same as on Thursday, All the trains will stop at the Fair Grounds. Special rates on all the trains and steamboats during the Fair.

☞It is reported that the "oyster war" has been resumed in Pamlico. Gen. W. G. Lewis, who is the State engineer, has been engaged in laying off grounds for parties wishing to enter and possess tracts of ten acres, which the law allows to every citizen who wishes to go and lay claim to that area, A few days ago his surveying boat was fired upon. It is said that 200 oystermen have banded together to hold their ground, and are threatening to drive General Lewis' boat away. It is said that he has applied to the Governor for aid. Will the "Pasquotank Rifles" be ordered out again?

☞The sixth annual Exhibition of the Elizabeth City Fair opens to-day. It will be entering day and it is hoped that, so far as possible, all articles intended to compete for premiums will be sent in not later than 4 o'clock this, Wednesday, afternoon. No article will be received after 10 o'clock A. M. to-morrow, Thursday, The principal attraction to-day will be the "Farmers Race." It promises to be an exciting contest. To-morrow, in addition to fine racing, there will be a grand Tournament at 11 A. M., and the Balloon Ascension and Parachute Jump in the afternoon. On Friday there will be some of the fastest running and trotting races ever witnessed on the track,

☞The Balloon ascension is attracting general interest. It will take place on the Fair Grounds to-morrow afternoon. The Aeronaut, Prof. T. W. Greenleaf, arrived a few days ago, having just finished several engagements in Pennsylvania, and decided to take a short rest. He has had a large experience, having made three hundred successful ascensions and jumps. He spent last winter in China and Japan where he "went up and came down" some fifty-six times, and since his return he has made seventy-five ascensions in Colorado, Missouri, New York and Pennsylvania. He has never had a serious accident nor made a failure. He is here with two balloons and, as above stated, will perform to-morrow, Thursday, Sept. 17th. It will be a grand sight, one that no one should fail to witness.

☞Corn at Norfolk from 65 to 67 cents.

——Those "Blazer Jackets" at Fowler & Co's are small in size and smaller in price. No good for 160 lbs of sweetness.

☞The boys and girls who read are the boys and girls who succeed. They know what to do, and they become the useful, capable and substantial men and women.

——California canned goods in largea variety at Robinson & Co.

☞A Western town has just celebrated a festival called "melon day," With rare good feeling and delicacy the festivities of the night that followed are left to the imagination.

——THE FRANKLIN is the best $2,50 shoe for men in the City. For sale by Moses Weisel.

——The BARGAIN COUNTER at Fowler & Co's is next the office, Be sure to look it over.

☞A favor should never be asked unless securing it be an absolute necessity. Never ask a favor from a stranger or even an acquaintance unless some business or other circumstance morally entitles you to assume that you are justified. When you really need a favor go to friends; if they are true they will grant it. Friends are often proved in adversity. It is a safe rule never to ask a favor unless you believe you can in some way reciprocate it.

——We are imitated by competitors in everything but prices. Robinson & Co.

——Fowler and Co are clearing out their remnants at prices that "talk loud."

☞There are few things that annoy more than the solitary fly. Where there are swarms of flies they have their time and attention partly occupied in mutual conversation, playing tag and other fly diversions, but get into a room with a solitary fly, and he will give you his undivided attention. "He will," wrote one who has had his share of experience, "buzz in your ear, tickle your head and perform all sorts of maddening impertinence, and when you strike at him he is away off at the other end of the room describing circles in the air and laughing most artlessly," It is the solitary fly that most annoys.

——Fowler & Co are closing out some lines of seasonable goods at cut prices—can't be appreciated until seen.

——The New Lee Cook Stove takes less wood, does better work, and is the largest and neatest stove ever sold in this market. Robinson & Co.

LOCAL MENTION

Everybody is talking "Fair,"—Mr. Harry C. Price, of Newport News, Va., is here on a visit to his parents Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Price, on Mathews street.—A number of entries for the running and trotting races are being made. There will be good races every day.—The yeresnifier writes:

She went to rest by the summer sea,
To read no books, to be free from care,
But from her face, it appears to me,
She has given some time to Browning there.

—Two gentlemen were sitting in front of the hotel. Said one, "Its the easiest thing in the world to make an assertion," "Yes, replied the other, "but it's hard to get it accepted."—Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Barnard, of Bridgeton, N. J., are visiting Mrs. Barnard's parents Mr. and Mrs G. B Thompson, on Pennsylvania Avenue.—All the Mills are very busy.—The Tournament promises to be a lively one. Each gallant Knight will do his best.—The man who keeps his mouth shut never has to eat any crow.—Superintendent Reid is doing some good work on the streets.—

"If you hadn't squeezed me so," said she, "I wouldn't have answered 'yes'"
"That shows in a simple way," said he, "The mighty power of the press,"

—The ceremony of crowning the "Queen of Love and Beauty" will take place at the Coronation Ball to-morrow night. Who will she be?—There are people who say that twice during the year they feel the need of rest, once just before vacation and again immediately after.—The new National Bank building is roofed with slate.—That barrel of Patapsco Flour is well worth contesting for, The lady exhibiting the best loaf of bread baked from that brand of flour will get it.—Mr. Lane Simons, who has charge of the CAROLINIAN Job Printing office, is turning out very satisfactory work. All who want anything in that line would do well to give him a call.—Judging from the following sent through the postoffice, he has found a change of temperature:

Warm was the look in her eyes of brown
When I met her down by the summer sea;
But now, when I meet the maid in town,
Cold is the stare that she gives to me.

—The CAROLINIAN office returns special thanks to Mr. J. H. Sawyer, of Camden, for a royal treat of most excellent cider. He understands how to make a good article.—A lady has bantered the editor to go up with her in the Balloon to-morrow He will see about it.—Wonder whose "pan of biscuit" will be awarded the two boxes of Rumford's Yeast Powder at the Fair? And, too, whose "cake" will win the box of Horsford's Bread Preparation?—Judge Brown called on Monday.—

Come to the Fair, come every one,
Father, mother, daughter and son,

—Miss Annie Gaskins has been visiting Miss Harriett Nixon at Winfall.—There was a delightful "Basket Party" at the Court House on Friday night. It was under the management of Misses Hallie Waters, Kena Dawson and Ruth Straughan.—The First National Bank has organized with Charles H. Robinson as President and Samuel A. Graham Cashier.—Williams, the Hackman, is prepared to take you to and from the Fair. All who desire to go will do well to let him know.—Pasquotank Court here next week.—"Copper," the popular Hackman, will be on deck during Fair days. Patronize him.—The melon season is about over.—Richard Salomonsky, son of Jacob Salomonsky, left on Monday to attend school at the Suffolk Military Academy.—The Academy will open its next session next Monday.—Young man, now is a good time to pay special attention to your "best girl." Take her to the Fair every day. She will appreciate it.—The celebrated Gruber Family will be here this week. There will be a feast of entertainments.—Judge Pool will deliver his entertaining and instructive lecture on Brazil before the Y. M. C. A. at an early date.—The first oyster license in this county was issued by Clerk Overman on Wednesday.—The entries at the Fair are encouraging.—Miss Nellie Skinner, daughter of Hon. T. G. Skinner, of Hertford, is visiting Miss Mary Griggs on Church street.—J. H. M. Butler has been appointed Superintendent of the colored Normal School to be established here.—Mr. Cam Melick, accompanied by his mother, left on Monday on a short trip North.—J. W. Albertson jr esq. will deliver the address to the Knights in front of the Grand Stand to-morrow (Thursday) at 11 o'clock A. M.—The Government Sloop "Alert" has returned from the lower Sounds.—Rev. Mr. Hassell preached at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. Monday night.—Mrs. Dr. McMullan, of Hertford, is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pallin on upper Main street.—On account of the Fair the CAROLINIAN goes to press on Tuesday evening.

On The Warpath.

It is reported that trouble is brewing at the Pamlico oyster grounds, Gen'l Gaston Lewis has been surveying entries in Hyde county and has just left there and gone to Pamlico to continue his work there of locating the plats that had been taken up for the purpose of engaging in the oyster culture. Those who are opposed to such measures made threats that they would shoot him, so it is said at the first stake he stuck to mark a boundary. Dr. F. P. Gates of Bayboro and Hon. W. T. Caho of New Bern, who have taken up grounds there are also included in the threats. Needing certain plots and documents from Bayboro, General Lewis went over after them, leaving his boat at Vandemere, and while he was gone thirteen rifle balls were fired through the sloop he was using. The sloop is Capt. Frisbie's It is intended to arrest some who made threats.—New Bern Journal.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

AN old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 820 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

TWO ROSES.

I send two roses to my fair—
A red one and a white—
And if she loves me she will wear
The pure white rose to-night;
But if my love deny me grace,
To bid my hope be dead,
In her sweet bosom will she place
The fatal one—the red.

* * * * *

In hope and fear the day I spend;
Each moment slowly goes,
For all my future doth depend
Upon a simple rose.
"Oh, that the night would come," I sigh,
Then wish 'twere only noon.
For me, if hope be doomed to die,
The night will come too soon.

* * * * *

She comes! and with her comes a breath
Of roses on the air,
And be it life or be it death,
I look upon my fair.
I see the white rose on her breast,
The red rose on her cheek;
What need of words to tell the rest,
So plain these roses speak!

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

A Budget of Late News From the Old World.

Fanatical Chinese Rioters Attack American Missionaries.

The Department of State has received a telegraphic despatch from the Minister at Pekin, China, reporting that a riot has occurred at Ichang, on the Yangtse-Kiang River, in the Province of Hoo Pe, and that an establishment of American missionaries there has been destroyed. No further particulars are given.

The gravity of the situation in China increases daily, and the Navy Department is lending its aid to protect American interests in answer to the representations of the Department of State. The Charleston is now on her way to China from San Francisco, and the Petrel, in the neighborhood of New York, is under orders to proceed immediately to China to strengthen Admiral Belknap's fleet; but they can hardly reach their destination inside of two months.

Particular concern is felt at the departments in this last riot because of its location. Ichang is about 200 miles further up the Yangtse-Kiang than Hong Kow, which is as far above the mouth as vessels of war can make their way under ordinary circumstances. In time of high water light draught war vessels may get above there, and, in fact, the Asiatic and the Monocacy have each succeeded in reaching Ichang. But unless there is high water in the river at present Admiral Belknap will have difficulty in getting a vessel up to the scene of trouble.

Corpse in a Coal Bunker.

A horrible discovery was made in the coal bunker of the Thompson line steamer Fremona at Montreal, Canada.

While working among the coal the men found a human foot and a search for the body to which the feet was supposed to belong was made. The stench in and around the bunker was almost unbearable.

When the men got to the bottom of the bunker they found the body of a man. It was a shriveled mass. It was doubled up, both feet were gone and the features were unrecognizable.

The remains proved to be those of S. Dickson, who kept a widowed mother in Shields, England. He was employed on the Fremona while in Shields Harbor as a coal trimmer. While thought to be ashore he was down in the bunker at work when the coal was being put in, and he was buried alive under 150 tons of coal.

The Immigration Into Canada.

In the Canadian House of Commons at Ottawa there was a lively discussion on the immigration estimates. Sir Richard Cartwright said that he thought it was time the Government ceased paying out $250,000 a year on an immigration which was either mythical or useless, inasmuch as a great majority of the immigrants leave Canada for the United States. In the last ten years the Government had spent nearly $3,000,000 on immigration. An immigration of 885,000 persons was reported, but the population had increased by only 504,000.

Burglars and Parricides.

Two young men named Hoeffler, aged respectively eighteen and twenty-four, broke into the house of their parents in Berin, Germany, believing it to be empty at the time, and proceeded to the bedroom of their father, intending to steal some money which was usually kept there. The elder Hoeffler was in the room, however, and grappled with the burglars. A fierce struggle followed, which ended in the old gentleman being beaten to death by his sons.

Sad Death on the Alps.

Charles Lane, of New York, who has been living at Oberhofen, near Thun, sixteen miles from Berne, Switzerland, recently escorted a party of women on an excursion to Beatenberg, on Lake Thun. The women returned by the same way they came, but Mr. Lane went by the dangerous Gustuchal route. Late next afternoon his body was found, horribly mutilated, at the foot of a precipice.

Fatal Earthquake Shocks.

The volcanic disturbances at San Salvador, San Miguel and Izalco culminated in a terrible earthquake shock, which was followed by successive minor shocks. The people rushed in a panic from their beds shrieking and praying, while buildings cracked, swayed and fell. Other towns have suffered greatly, some being virtually destroyed. Some lives were lost.

Distress Leads to Disorder.

In the Province of Orel, Russia, bands of peasants are roving over the highways attacking convoys of grain and food even where the convoys are escorted by soldiers. Fights are of frequent occurrence and many persons have been killed. Crime is rampant owing to a desire to escape starvation by imprisonment. The jails are crowded with prisoners.

Collapse of a Building.

A house which had but recently been completed and occupied in Regensburg, Germany, collapsed and eight of the occupants were killed and a number injured. The builder has been arrested, charged with manslaughter, and an official inquiry is in progress.

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Tons of Dynamite Explode, Killing Sixteen Workmen.

The dynamite factory of Farrinold & Co., near White Pigeon, Mich., exploded the other day It is estimated that there were about twenty tons of dynamite in the building, which was a three story brick. Scarcely a vestige of it remains.

Sixteen workmen, mostly Swedes and Norwegians, were completely annihilated. Not an atom of them is to be found, and it is impossible to learn their names, as the company's books are lost. As it was early none of the proprietors were in the building at the time of the explosion. The loss is estimated at $35,000.

The concussion in White Pigeon was awful, and citizens were badly frightened. Goods in the stores were thrown from the shelves, and the houses rocked to and fro. The spire of the German Lutheran Church fell with a loud crash, and the walls of several buildings are cracked and damaged.

SOUTHERN COTTON MILLS.

Rapid Increase in the Extent of the Industry.

The annual report of Secretary H. G. Hester, of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, contains some remarkable statistics as to the operation of Southern cotton mills which have not yet reached the public.

It shows that of a total of 341 mills in the thirteen cotton States, 286 have been in active operation, including 276 old and ten new mills. Two are idle and thirteen mills are not completed. The number of mills reported last year were 334, of which seven were burned. Adding new mills and deducting consolidations, there are 340 mills in the States. The principal gain in consumption has been in Georgia and the Carolinas. In the Carolinas a large number of old mills have increased their spindles and all the spindles in the States mentioned have been busily engaged.

The total consumption of the South has increased ten per cent. and several States now have a consumption amounting to as much as that of the entire South ten years ago. The total spindles in the South are 1,989,745, of which 149,020 are new. There were 115,731 spindles idle, and 57,404 are in course of construction.

JULES GREVY.

The Venerable Ex-President of the French Republic is Dead.

Ex-President Jules Grevy, of the French Republic, died a few days days ago at Paris, at the age of eighty-four.

His death removes another of the prominent figures of French history that were arrayed against monarchy and despotism, and were instrumental in overthrowing the Napoleonic dynasty and establishing the infant French Republic on a firm and secure footing.

M. Grevy was a Radical in politics and a member of the extreme left in the French Chamber. After the fall of Imperialism M. Grevy became President of the French Assembly, and filled that position again in 1876.

He was twice elected President of the French Republic, resigning from that office in 1887, being forced to the step by the famous Wilson cause celebre. He was an able and impassioned orator and an ardent admirer of pure democratic constitutions.

A LOCOMOTIVE EXPLODES.

Fatal Railroad Accident at Oyster Bay, Long Island.

Three Men Hurled Hundreds of Feet and Instantly Killed.

The boiler of a locomotive under full steam exploded in front of the Glen Cove (Long Island) depot, instantly killing three men, dangerously injuring another, breaking the engine into many fragments, and demolishing part of the station roof.

The locomotive was only two years old and had been used on fast trains. The train behind it consisted of a baggage car, smoker and two coaches pretty well filled with passengers. It was 7:03 o'clock, and Engineer James Donaldson and Fireman Townsend Dickinson were in the cab. Brakeman Michael Mahoney came forward to get the time, while Conductor Alfred Jones stood some little distance behind him at the moment of the explosion. The latter's head was cut open by a piece of iron and he was frightfully scalded. Dickinson, Donaldson and Mahoney were hurled in opposite directions, the latter's body falling on the roof of the third car, while the others fell in a neighboring meadow. The engine, down to the wheels, was a total wreck. A large portion of the platform was torn up and many of the train's windows broken. Fortunately, none of the passengers was injured.

The explosion brought people rushing from all parts of Oyster Bay. Conductor Jones was carried on a stretcher to the house of the nearest physician. His condition was critical. Donaldson had thirteen years' experience in railroading and had a good reputation. He leaves a widow and two children. Dickinson was thirty and leaves several children and a crippled mother. Mahoney was twenty.

The only theory of the cause of the explosion so far is that the water might have been allowed to run too low in the boiler. Master Mechanic Thompson of the Long Island road thinks it could not have occurred from overpressure.

THIRTEEN ROBBERS KILLED

The Men Who Robbed the Express Car in Texas Shot Down.

The train robbers who were thought to have escaped across the Rio Grande River with a sum said to be $20,000 that they secured from an express car on the Southern Pacific Railroad, were met near Uvalde, Texas, by a body of rangers who had been in pursuit of them and a battle took place.

From reports received, thirteen of the robbers and two rangers were killed and several on both sides were wounded. The rangers followed what was thought to be the course pursued by the robbers through the mountain passes, and although they had at several times lost the trail, they gained on the robbers. Next day they discovered unmistakable evidence that the men they were looking for were only a few miles ahead of them and were headed towards Las Vegas, New Mexico. The rangers after pushing on a portion of the night were rewarded next day by falling in with the outlaws.

The engagement between the two parties was short, as the bandits were outnumbered. They held the best position, however, and stood their ground until the number of their dead and wounded was so great that further resistance was impossible, and then the remainder fled. It is said that only two men escaped.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

A Drunken Bear on a Spree Kills Four Persons.

A strange and terrible accident has occurred in the neighborhood of Vilna, Russia. A large tame bear, which had been trained by the servants of a country gentleman to drink votky (whisky), entered a village tavern and killed the tavern keeper and three members of his family in a fit of intoxication.

The tragedy was brought about by the owner of the tavern, Isaac Rabbanovitch, attempting to snatch from the bear a keg of votky, which it had commenced to drink, after staving it in with its paws. In the conflict that ensued the infuriated animal hugged to death the tavern keeper, his two sons and daughter. When some peasants arrived on the scene with guns they found the infuriated animal asleep on the floor in a pool of blood and votky, surrounded by its four victims. The bear was immediately shot.

FLAX STATISTICS.

The Amount of Acreage in the Western States.

The Census Office has made public the following preliminary statistics of the acreage in flax and amount of flaxseed produced in ten Western States in the year ending June 1, 1890, the figures being prepared under the direction of Special Agent Hyde, in charge of the Division of Agriculture: Idaho, 8002 acres, 83,409 bushels; Iowa, 217,745 acres, 2,118,032 bushels; Kansas, 114,069 acres, 964,127 bushels; Minnesota, 303,707 acres, 2,721,887 bushels; Missouri, 36,724 acres, 164,445 bushels; South Dakota, 355,394 acres, 1,801,108 bushels; Washington, 4270 acres, 42,204 bushels; Wisconsin, 6073 acres, 68,227 bushels.

CHANGED HER MIND.

That Was Why Dr. Ballard Killed His Sweetheart and Himself.

Dr. C. E. Ballard, member of a prominent family at Saybrook, Ill., shot and killed Miss Bertha Ison and then killed himself. He had been engaged to the young woman and on a recent day took out a license to marry her. She changed her mind next day and refused to marry him.

Next morning he made a final appeal, and being refused shot her through the heart. He then shot himself three times in the breast and once in the head. He died in a few moments. He was thirty years old. Miss Ison's widowed mother is nearly dead with grief.

BOILED THEMSELVES.

Suicide Follows Suicide in the Most Shocking Manner.

A detailed account of the horrors at the Weston Insane Asylum, in West Virginia, have been made public.

Suicide has followed suicide, it is charged, for some time among the inmates, and they have all been attended by the most horrible circumstances. Men have killed themselves by boiling to death and suspension by ropes from the windows. All this has been done in sight of the guards and no investigation has been made. There seem to have been no inquest held on the dead, and a general inefficiency is manifested in the management.

DYNAMITE IN WHEAT.

One Man Killed and Four Injured in a Singular Accident.

William Mull was killed and four others fatally injured at the farm of Daniel Drowneller, near Findlay, Ohio, by an explosion in a wheat thrasher.

The machine exploded with terrific effect, wrecking the place and blowing pieces of iron through the roof. It was thought that the boiler had given way, but it was found to be intact.

Further investigation showed that some one had placed a dynamite cartridge in a sheaf of wheat, and when it was fed through the machine the explosion followed.

AHMED RITSHDI PASHA, the Turkish commander in Yemen, the principal division of Arabia, has utterly crushed out a revolt which broke out recently in that province and has struck wholesale terror into the hearts of the insurgents. The Turkish Pasha subsequently entered Sana, the capital city of Yemen, in triumphal procession, having in his train fourteen camels laden with hands cut from the rebel chieftains of Yemen.

SECRETARY TRACY issued an order for the Chiefs of Bureaus immediately to prepare the Yorktown for service on the Pacific station, and the gunboat Petrel for service on the Asiatic station.

TESTS made at the Naval Ordnance Proving Grounds, near Washington, of the new smokeless powder were highly satisfactory.

JUDGE THOMAS M. COOLEY, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, presented his resignation on account of ill health. Judge Cooley was appointed by President Cleveland at the organization of the Commission, for a term of six years. At the first meeting of the Commission he was unanimously chosen Chairman by his associates.

THE Chilian Government agreed to reimburse the United States for the expense incurred in chasing the ship Itata.

RICH gold bearing quartz has been discovered on the Atikokan iron range at Port Arthur, Canada.

THE wall of a foundry in Leeds, England, collapsed. Two children were instantly killed and two others were removed from the ruins fatally injured.

EMPEROR WILLIAM and Prince-Regent Luitpold reviewed the two Bavarian army corps in Munich. The weather was splendid, and the review presented a brilliant spectacle. The Emperor was at the head of the regiment of which he is Honorary Colonel.

AN attempt was made to wreck a train on the Lehigh Valley road, near Phillipsburg, Penn., by exploding dynamite. Lewis Remel was arrested charged with the deed.

THE National Association of Railway Postal Clerks elected H. M. Robinson, of Atlanta, Ga., as President, and C. E. Lagrave as Secretary and Treasurer, at Watertown, N. Y.

SADIE SHAW, four years old, and Johany Souders, one year older, were playing in a newly excavated sewer trench at Bridgton, N. J., when the earth caved in, burying both. The girl was instantly killed and the boy received fatal injuries.

EMPEROR WILLIAM and Prince-Regent Luitpold witnessed a sham fight at Munich, Bavaria. The western army, under Prince Luitpold's son Arnolph, was victorious. The Emperor congratulated the victors.

TWO HORRIBLE DEATHS.

A Fight Among Farmers in Which One Avenges His Brother.

A terrible fight among farmers is reported from Celina, Ohio. While James Lewis and Tom Johnson were running a thrashing machine on John Coles's farm, Lewis cut Johnson on the hand. He claimed that the act was accidental. Johnson, however, would listen to no explanation, and rushed at Lewis, striking him a terrible blow in the face. Lewis fell under the thrashing machine and was drawn between the cylinders. He was killed instantly.

Frank Lewis, a brother of James, was witness of the affair. He caught up a pitchfork, and, before anybody had time to restrain him, he plunged the tines into Johnson's stomach, killing him almost instantly. Lewis is under arrest.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

HANLON, of Pittsburg, has played in centre field for eleven years.

CONNOR has struck out more times than any of the New Yorks.

THE Baltimore Club has released Second Baseman Wise and Pitcher Blakely.

THE colored Gorham team is credited with having won forty-one successive games.

LOUISVILLE has been crippled through the sickness of Stratton and the lameness of Donovan.

THE only use Cleveland's team has been this season was to help Chicago win the League pennant.

RHINES, of the Cincinnati League, has not pitched a winning game against the Pittsburgs this season.

DAVIES, the crack pitcher of the Milwaukee Club, is the son of a minister and will not pitch on Sunday.

AN iron-bound contract with John B. Day is the thing that keeps Pitcher Welch on the pay roll of the New York Club.

MCGILL, of the St. Louis Association, is a great pitcher. He has the most perplexing curves of any left-hander in the country.

ARTHUR CLARKSON, of the New Yorks, pitches a good deal like his famous brother John, of the Bostons, and also affects his mannerisms.

THE Cincinnati League Club released Pitcher Radbourn (too high salaried) and signed Crane, upon many promises to abstain from liquor.

BROUTHERS still leads the Boston Association Club in batting, but Brown and Duffy are close behind him. Five of the team have over .300 in batting.

FIVE of the Boston Leaguers have now over one hundred safe hits each; namely, Long, Stovey, Tucker, Brodie and Nash. The latter leads the team in batting.

NO more young players will be tried by Chicago the rest of the season. With Hutchison, Vickery and Gumbert doing good work the club is well fixed all round now.

MILLER, of Pittsburg, is the only major league catcher who doesn't wear a chest protector. He persistently refuses to wear it because he thinks it interferes with freedom of movement.

THE New York Club has Pitchers Rusie, John Ewing, Welch, Sharrott, Barr, Clarkson and Coughlin under contract, and has made an offer to Daley, late of Boston, and all this after allowing Keefe to go.

WHILE Baltimore and Washington were disputing over Short Stop Ely, of the defunct Duluth Club, the Brooklyn League Club stepped in and signed him; also Pitcher Inks, whom the Washington Club thought it had secured.

BROUTHERS, of the Boston Reds, is hitting the ball this year as in the old Detroit days. On the last Western trip he made a record for the longest hit at Columbus and Cincinnati, and recently he twice put the ball over the right field fence on the home grounds.

THE value to a pitcher of having a strong team back of him has been illustrated in the case of Easton, who was not able to do anything while in Columbus, but as soon as he had a steady team like the St. Louis Browns back of him he is able to do excellent work.

WHILE Anson bears the reputation of being a great baseball general, and is the all towering element in the Chicago team, yet the fact is that much of the brains of the team are to be found in the man who plays third base. If the history of this remarkable club is ever written the chances are that full credit for its success will not be given to that sturdy and brainy ball player, Tom Burns, to which he is entitled.

THERE was a great eleven innings fight in Chicago the other day between the local team and the New Yorks, and darkness put an end to the game, neither side having scored a run. There was only one error made on either side, and that was a ball dropped by Pfeffer after a long hard run. There were no passed balls and no wild pitches; in fact, the game was as nearly perfect as has been seen in some time.
